ABOUT THE PLACE

Sattal is one of the few unspoiled and unpolluted fresh water biomes in India. The names of the seven lakes of Sattal are Purna Tal, Ram Tal, Sita tal, Laxman Tal, and Garud Tal. Sattal is often compared with Westmore land of England by Britishers.

These lakes are paradise for migratory birds as they stay for some time here during their migration. These birds try to escape the harsh cold of the great Himalayan region by migrating to lower areas of the Himalayas. If you are an avid birder and photography fantasize you then this is an ideal place for your holiday.

Set amidst the dense coniferous trees of dwindling pines and old oaks, this lake is untouched by the hands of modernization. It is among one of the unpolluted freshwater biomes in India. One can spot various species of fishes, playful birds, vibrantly colored butterflies and varied flora and fauna around the lakeside, making it a safe haven on earth.

One can explore the natural vistas, catch a glimpse of the exotic Himalayan birds, indulge in butterfly watching, enjoy sightseeing or go for long nature walks in the gorgeous vistas.
